But nine members of council answered to their names last night when the roll was called, and there being no quorum the meeting was adjourned. The president had not yet left the chair after declaring council adjourned when two more members walked in. It was then too late. The members of the police and fire department were very much disappointed as they should have received their month's pay last night. A special meeting will probably be held some evening this week.

This work was begun yesterday and four executions were served by Deputy Marshal Biddle. Charles Stout is mentioned as one of the Republican candidates for School Board in the Third ward. There is nightly caucusing in some of the wards, of an informal sort, but next week ward politics will open out in earnest.

Mitchel Post No. 45, G. A. R., holds the regular muster tomorrow evening. The Prohibition Club meets to nominste a city ticket. The Caledonian club meets at the new hall in the Buckingham building. The Clark County W. C. T. About ten days ago the money box on the Clifton street car, driven by Joseph Chandler, was stolen from the car while Chandler was changing the mules from one end to the other. Last night as Chandler was driving around the corner of Clifton and Limeston streets, and while engaged in "throwing" the switch, some one jumped on the platform and grabbing the money box, jumped off and ran up the alley at the rear of the planing mill. Chandler pulled a revolver and fired three times at the fellow but evidently did not bit him. Officer Rizer heard the shots and was soon on the scene, but the fellow had made his escape.

Mrs. C. Wiley, daughter of John Confer sr., with whom she has been making her home of late, died very suddenly at her home in Clifton, Monday night. She ate a hearty supper Monday evening, afterwards going to call on her brother John Confer, where she remained until 10 p. m. Returning home at that hour, she went to bed and, in less than half an hour, was dead. Heart disease is supposed to have been the trouble. John Confer, her tather, started for Washington, D. C., Monday morning, but is expected home this evening in response to a telegram sent yesterday. Mrs. Wiley's family consists of two children.

The patrol wagon was run to the I., B. & W. passenger station last evening about seven o'clock on summons to take charge of a man with a broken leg. The party proved to be Miletus Baker, who had been to London and caught a fall, refracturing the leg which carried Baker into court as a petitioner for damages against the city. He was hauled home making the third time the wagon has cared for that leg. About ten o'clock Mrs. Justina Fish, an aged lady living on Plum street, north of Columbia, mother of Philip Fish, the builder, slipped on s piece of ice near the street car stables on West Main street and tell, breaking her leg. The patrol took the ledy home. Owing to her advanced years, the injury is a serious one. The police patrol box at Main and Sycamore streets opened itself last evening and some rascally boys turned in a call giving the wagon a useless ers filed by the Trustees. the front rank of his new profession since he surprise by its power and intelligence now to that power and intelligence he has added veterans of the stage. Every trace of nervousness is eliminated from his work, and from first to last be moves upon the stage as one "native, and to the manor born." The character of Macbeth affords Mr. Miln an opportunity to display that intellectuality which his many years of student life possessed him of in an eminent degree. It is at once evident that he has thought through every line of the play, and analyzed those metaphysical beauties which are more frequent and conpicuous in Macbeth than in any other of Shakspeare's plays. Macbeth is a study in metaphysics; it is also a tragedy. Milu interprets it both as a metaphysician and tragedian. He undoubtedly presented the finest interpretation of this complex play ever seen in this city. The chief merit of his performance consisted in its swift and artistic alterations of method. At first one i clines to feel this rapid change of manner as a break in the dramatic unity of his work, but if we think deeper, we shall see that Macbeth's character is one of vacillation. Miln, looking at th play from the standpoint of a thinker, has seen this; as an actor, be embodies it in voice, gesture and action. As Macbeth, Miln did storm as a tempest; he also mouned as the wind when it blows sadly through the leafless branches of winter. The clarion cry: "Hang out our banners on the outer walls!" was attered in stentorian tones; but who will soon forget the unutterable sadness of the the tidings of the queen's death is brought to calls for force, tremendons force, and this Mile imparts to it. It also calls for the sad wail of a nature broken and weary of the strife and agony of life, and no actor within the range of our observation has more thoroughly exhibited both extremes. In this play Mr. Miln is ably supported. Mr. Lindsey gave a highly creditable performance ot Macduff, marred by slight mannerisms, and Mr. Nelson's Banquo was thoroughly satistactory. Miss Adele Payn, as Lady Macbeth justified the highest enconiums that have been showered upon her by the contemporary press. She has the physique, face, voice feeling and intelligence necessary to a correct and powerful delineation of the part. Her work is full of surprises. Magnetic power, controlled by fine and quick preceptions; makes all she does upon the stage effective and impressive. Her sleep walking scene is a masterpiece; weird, sad, mystic, tender, terrible, it leaves the beholder halt horrified at the picture of terrible remorse which it conveys to the mind. We deem it highly probable that no two people can be found in this country today to give a more correct, im-

E! Mahdi and Gen. Gordon

"Yes," said a well-known man, entertaining a party of gentlemen at the club, "I know El Mahdi, the False Prophet, and Gen. Gordon, too-have met them both many times." "What is the secret of the Mahdi's power?" was asked. "Religious fanaticism on the part of his followers. He is an ordinary-looking man-looks like any other Arab of the fellah or peasant class, and would not be distinguished from his followers for any apparent qualities of leadership. He is, however, a very ready talker and better versed in the Koran than most others. A man's influence among the Mohammedans depends largely on his knowledge of the Kora and there, as elsewhere, on his abili-to talk convincingly."

History-I am reminded by this Soudan business-is a pack of lies until time sifts out the truth. Without wishing to east aspersion on the dead, but simply in justice to the living, here are some facts about the late "Chinese Gordon which are said to be well known to members of the United States army, both here and abroad, and are not mentioned in the London clubs without a frowning resentment. A common sailor named Ward, bailing from Rochester, N. Y., went to China, and, after loating for a time on the shores of the vasty deep, proposed to a neighboring Mandarin, or chief, for the sake of an adventure, that if he would give him a troop of 250 "beach-combers" hewould capture for him the walled town of Foo Chow-I think it was Foo Chow. The beach-combers were runaway sail-ors of all nationalities, confined by the Mandarin for misdemeanors. were in for anything for fun. Ward assaulted the town; the garrison and inhabitants, numbering several thousand, fled, and the Mandarin was so tickled that he gave Ward his daughter to wed. The victorious army grew to be the "ever victorious;" a British of-ficer was put in command by the authorities and gained some successes, and then came Gen. Gordon and got the glory, and all England and all the world resounded with his praises. The sailor Ward disappeared—quietly made way with, so it was hinted—and the grieving Mandarin and his desolate daughter erected to the memory of the obscure American seaman a superb monument-the only one of its kind ever reared on Chinese soil to commen orate a foreigner.—Chicago Tribune's Man Around Town.

Parson Weems. The Life of Washington was Weems's main work, based on the fact of his having been "Rector of Mount Vernon Parish." It was written in 1809, and was during many years afterward peddled by him in person throughout Virginia, meeting however with a [very seanty sale. He was the first book canvasser that ever traversed the state. In his way he was quite a character, according to the picture drawn by a gentleman now living in Fredericksburg, who in his youth knew him. "I have often seen him," said this gentleman, "endeavoring to sell his books about town and on court greens. He was a Prince William [County] man, and a minister of the Episcopal Church, though all his children became Methodists. It was his custom to travel about in a small vehicle selling, in addition to his Life of Washington, his Life of Marion, and two pam-phlets entitled The Drunkard's Lookng-Glass and The Swearer's Prayer. Now and then he would scatter short moral pieces in doggerel, and printed on slips of paper. He was extremely fond of playing the violin, and used it also as a means to draw attention to his wares. Being a parson, and hence ind sposed to exhibiting himself as a fiddler in public, he was accustomed to conceal himself, while handling the instrument, in a species of booth made by means of blankets stretched on poles. On one occasion, while thus engaged, the wind blew down the side of his booth against which his back was turned, exposing him to the full view of a gaping crowd. Unconscious of the accident he kept fiddling away, Unconscious till the crowd, no longer able to re-strain its tittering, burst forth in a roar of laughter which instantly forced him to see himself as others had been seeing him. His annoyance was trerange of human passion is played upon. It mendous, and he forthwith decamped from the ground amidst a hurricane of derisive remarks showered upon him by the rough multitude."-Frederick Daniel, in Harper's Magazine for March.

Art Application.

It seems not unnatural that a Boston correspondent should make a Chicago man the hero of this incident in what is called real life.

A prominent merchant of one of our Western cities, who counts his dollars with seven figures, but who, in the ardent pursuit of wealth, has neglected such frivolities as literature and art. was recently visiting Boston with his family, and seeing the sights of "the Hub." In the course of his wanderings he entered the Museum of Fine Arts, and after gazing superciliously around at the contents thereof, his attention finally rested upon some fine paintings by Gustave Dore, which were at the time the pride of the city, These seemed to interest him, for, turning to his guide, he said, G. Dore? are these by G. Dore?"

On receiving an affirmative response, he continued, 'It seems to me that he has improved greatly of late, hasn't

The Forests of Alaska.

Alaska forests contain enough timber to supply the world. The forests of pine, spruce, i.r., and hemlock cover every island of the archipelago and a goodly portion of the mainland. The rees are straight and tall and grow close together. The only saw-mill in operation is at Douglas Island, and so far there has not been a cord of timber cut for shipment. The trees, as a rule, do not have large dimensions and will not always cut up into good-sized boards. For fuel, however, the wood is excellent, and much of it is available or building purposes. There is little decorative wood, although the yellow pine is richly colored and might be ised to advantage in interior work. Alaska sprace is an excellent variety. and often measures live feet in diameter. It is considered the best spruce in the world, and the supply is very abundant. In the interior of the country timber is of much heavier growth than near the coast and on the island. Regarding the hemlock, there is a large supply and the bark compares favorably with that of the Eastern trees, used in tanning establishments. None have yet attempted to compute the value of Alaska forests. It may be they will not be necessary for years to come, but whenever wood grows scarce dsewhere, or whenever civilization fastens itself upon Alaska, the timber of the region will be found ready at hand and existing in rich profusion. laleulating only approximately the value of our possessions to-day, the forests must be considered. Practically inexhaustible, they add most materially to the wealth of the territory .--Letter in San Francisco Chroniele.

pamphlet free

Piles are frequently preceded by a sense of weight in the back, loins and lower part of the abdomen, causing the patient to suppose he has some effection of the kidneys or neighboring organs. At times, symptoms of indigestion are present, flatulency, uneasiness of the stomach, etc. A moisture, like perspiration, producing a very disagreeable itching, after getting warm, is a common attendant. Blind, Bleeding and Itching Piles yield at once to the application of Dr. Bosanko's Pile Remedy, which acts directly upon the parts affected, absorbing the Tumors, allaying the intense itching, and effecting a permanent cure. A Dangerous Surgical Operation.—A fatal mistake. At the time Dr. Vanco of Cleveland, performed the operation on the lady for the removal of a cancer of the stomach he found when too late that the poor wowan had no cancer to be removed. The disease was indigestion, and if she had taken the Shaker Extract of Roots (Sieg. Psyrup) that swind distress at the pit of the stemach, which made the do-tors think she had cancer, the transfer of the stemach, there have removed. ach, which made the dostors think she had cancer, would have been removed. Distress after eating, dull, heavy feeling in the head, with pains in the side and back all vanish atter using this wonderful remedy. The tired, languid feeling gives place to strength and vigor.

Mrs. Delia Marsh writes from Pea Ridge, Benton Co., Ark., that she had It spepsia in the worst form for five years, and that nothing gave any relief until she used the siegel Symp. Sheays that two bottles cured her. The Shaker Tar Capsules are good for Coughs.
